2.3 Market Overview and Competition

Overview of the Stock Exchange of Thailand in 2016

The Stock Exchange of Thailand in 2016 was another good year for after its indexes were improved among the fluctuation caused by both domestic and international factors, although in the first quarter the household consumption and the private investment grew at a low rate and there was no significant sign of economic recovery. Plus, there was concern about effects from the problem of drought and the increase of household non-performing loans, which pressured the financial institutions to be even more wary of lending, but with the motivation of the government’s ongoing economic-stimulus measure such as the farmer assistance measure, the Ban Pracharat project, the tax incentives for Songkran spending, and the progress of the government's infrastructure investment project, and so on; and the fact that the Thai tourism sector remained an important economic driving force owing to the continually increasing number of Thai and foreign tourists, especially Chinese tourists, and the return of European and Russian tourists; consequently, from the second quarter the Thai economic situation began to gradually recover. Regarding international factors, despite the deflation of the Chinese and Japanese economies, the U.S. and Euro economies also began to recover in due time, along with the recent improvement in the global crude oil price. In addition, since June 23rd, 2016 when the result of the referendum decision to leave the European Union ("Brexit") was known, global investors positively expected instead that the Fed would not hastily raise interest rates and central banks in many countries would implement additional economic stimulus measures to reduce the Brexit impact. Also, after August 7th, 2016, confidence in Thailand's political stability was boosted because of the announced result of the Constitutional Referendum; the fund flows were therefore driven back into the Thai stock exchange continuously. During the third quarter of 2016, foreign investors' net buy in the Thai stock market was unprecedentedly high at 97,300 million Baht, having caused the SET index to adjust up to the highest point of the year at 1,558.32 points on August 1st, 2016 (the SET index touched its lowest point of the year at 1,220.96 points on January 11th, 2016) before the Thai stock index moved down and fluctuated most dramatically during the fourth quarter of 2016 due to the concern about domestic and international factors such as the U.S. presidential election result and in December 2016, the Fed's decision to increase interest rates to 0.25% and the signal of interest rate hikes 3 times in the same year. However, at the end of 2016, the SET index closed at 1,542.94 points and the Thai stock market delivered a total return of +19.8%YoY, being the highest in the Asian region (as shown in the graph), with the average daily (including prop trade) turnover (including SET and MAI) at 52,700 million Baht, i.e. an increase by 19.0%YoY (if excluding prop trade, the turnover would be at 47,100 million Baht, equal to an increase by 17.2%YoY).

In 2016, foreign investors, securities company's accounts and institutional investors played a crucial role in pushing forward the Thai stock index; in particularly, foreign investors reversed to be net buyers (in both SET and MAI) of 78,300 million Baht after their net-selling status for the previous 3 consecutive years, with the turnover ratio increasing from 22.2% in 2015 to 25.6% of the total turnover. Similarly, securities company's accounts reversed into net buying of 26,900 million Baht following their net selling in the previous year, with the turnover ratio increasing from 9.2% in 2015 to 10.5% of the total turnover. For institutional investors, their net buying continued for the fourth year, but with a decrease to only 472 million Baht; however, their turnover ratio increased from 9.4% in 2015 to 10.1% of the total turnover. Meanwhile, retail/individual investors switched into net buying of as high as 106,000 million Baht, with the turnover ratio decreasing from 59.2% in 2015 to 53.8% of the total turnover.

Securities Business Overview of 2016

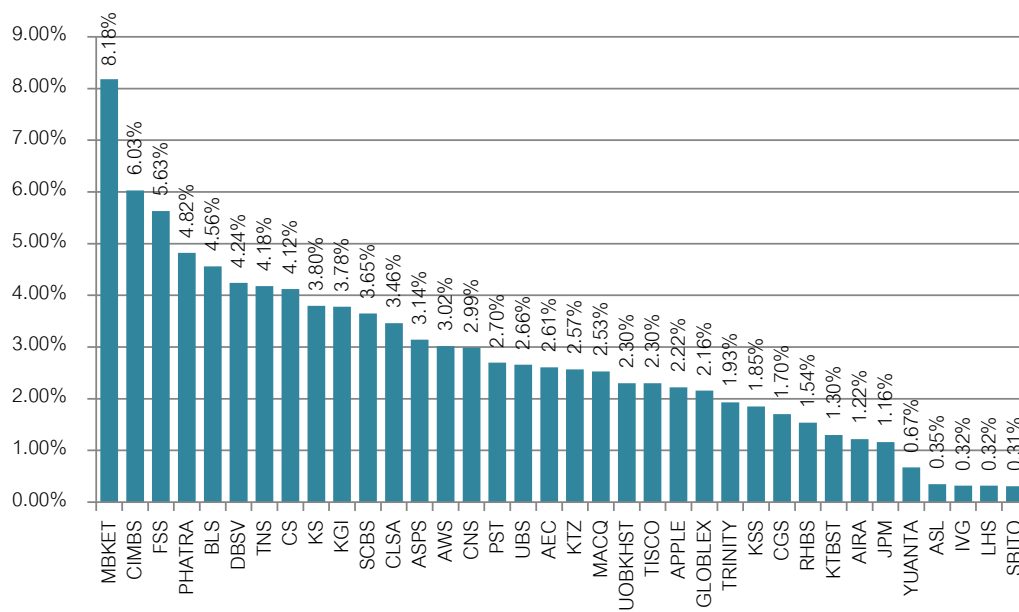

For 2016, the securities business profit increased from 2015 in accordance with the improved situation of the Thai stock market; the profits from the investment portfolio of securities companies increased outstandingly from the previous year after the investment confidence and climate enhanced increasingly from the beginning to the third quarter of 2016. The price competition was somewhat found in the brokerage business. After the end of 2015, another securities company was introduced with a low commission campaign during the beginning period of service. However, in 2016 the turnover commission rate (prop-trade excluded) of the securities group still decreased slightly to 0.11% from 0.12% in 2015. In accumulation with the entire year of 2016, the average daily turnover (including SET and MAI) increased at 19.0%YoY to 52,700 million Baht (if excluding prop trade, the turnover would be at 47,200 million Baht, equal to an increase by 17.2%YoY). Consequently, the revenue from the brokerage business could be improved. In the meantime, the revenue from the investment banking business was quite firm although in 2016 the market overview showed that new securities (IPO) were registered for 27 companies, as decreasing from 41 companies in 2015 (divided into 10 companies with securities listed in the SET, 13 companies in the MAI, and 4 companies in the REIT), and that the issue size throughout 2016 decreased by 59.3%YoY to 57,800 million Baht. Securities Business Trend in 2017

Although in 2017, the Thai stock market finds its positive factors in 1) the recovery of oil price after the oil producing countries both inside and outside of the OPEC group negotiated the reduction of productivity to solve the oversupply issue; 2) the continuation of the easy monetary policy in the developed world such as Japan and European countries after the slow recovery of the world's economy; 3) the Thai economic situation, which still has a chance to expand similarly to the previous year at 3.0-3.2%YoY according to the more obvious government investment after the ongoing progress in the bidding of government's infrastructure projects such as double track railway and MRTA/BTS Skytrain extension, as well as the improved private consumption after the end of the First Car project and the personal income tax reform. Also, the governmental sector gradually issues measures to help farmers. For the tourism industry, it is expected to keep growing constantly. And 4) the profits of companies listed in the SET are estimated to still expand at approximately 12-13%YoY, ranking among the top in the Asian region; nonetheless, the Thai stock market still has risk factors to pay attention to: namely 1) the fund flow that tends to go out from newborn stock exchange after Donald Trump won the presidential election and became the new President of the United States, who has major plans of infrastructure investment and tax reduction to draw the funds back into the U.S.A; 2) the signal of interest rate increases 3 times this year after the improvement in the U.S. economy, causing the currency exchange rate to be volatile; 3) the economy in the Euro countries may slow down due to the Brexit effect and the higher political uncertainty owing to new elections to be held in several countries, especially in France, Italy and the Netherlands; and 4) the volatility of financial institutions in Europe and China, including the tendentiously increasing NPL problem of Thai financial institutions.

With all the above reasons, we think that in 2017 Thailand's economic expansion will face great challenges and much pressure towards investment in the Thai stock exchange. Having evaluated the SET index target for 2017 based on the PER estimation from the previous Bands, we found that the lowest point in 5 years was at 13.8 times and the suitable average point of the Fair PER was at 15.7 times, resulting in the index margin between 1,474-1,683 points under the hypothesis on the overall operation of registered companies with a growing chance of 13.8%YoY, and the GDP at 3.2%YoY. However, with the comparison of Forward PER in 2017 for the regional stock markets, it was found that the Forward PER of the Thai stock exchange was at 15.2 times, which is no longer the cheapest or the most distinctive country. Thus, this year the investment in the Thai stock exchange must be carried out in a careful manner because the return on investment in the Thai stock exchange may not be sufficiently convincing to enable fund inflows; and the suitable investment strategy should emphasize only on stocks with outstanding and strong basic factors.

For the securities business this year, it is expected to still face a highly competitive situation in the brokerage business after a few new securities companies were opened (from the end of 2016 where there were already 36 member companies). Therefore, it may be difficult to avoid the price competition; however, in order to survive under the liberalization policy of the securities exchange commission of Thailand, each securities company should be prepared to maintain the old customer base and expand to a new market by increasing the service quality with quality investment recommendation and analysis, as well as to boost or distribute income to other businesses such as the investment banking business or the private fund management business, in order to reduce the risk of dependency on the income earned solely from the brokerage business.
